

Neil Meader

Research Director – Precious Metals

Having joined GFMS in 2000, Neil is currently in the position of Research Director at Thomson Reuters GFMS. This role centres on acting as editor and manager in chief of the consultancy's precious metals reports and research. He is also responsible for relations with the World Gold Council and data provision for their Gold Demand Trends report. From a research perspective, Neil covers most of Europe, trends in world fashions relating to jewellery and all areas of global scrap from non-jewellery sources. Previously within GFMS, he looked after the research in the Arabian Gulf countries.

Prior to GFMS, Neil worked as an analyst in the energy industry and in soft commodity trading. He holds an honours degree in Economic History from Exeter University.
