

Philip Newman

Research Director – Precious Metals

Philip Newman is a Research Director with Thomson Reuters GFMS.

After graduating with Honours in Economics from the University of Surrey in the UK Philip joined GFMS in 1994. During his tenure he has managed the company's research across much of Europe as well as the Middle East.

In 1998, following a management buy-out at GFMS, Philip became the country manager for the United States, Turkey and Egypt, with responsibility for the company's analysis of all areas of demand in these critical jewellery and investment markets. In each instance this involves an ongoing programme of field research focussed on a network of key contacts covering every area of the supply chain.

As well as this field research Philip contributes to a range of reports published by Thomson Reuters GFMS, including their authoritative annual Gold, Silver and PGM Surveys and the company's short and long-term forecast reports.
