

Sanjay Saraf

Research Director – Base Metals

Sanjay joined Thomson Reuters GFMS in September 2011, bringing with him a wealth of experience in commodity markets. He began his career as a grains analyst before spending a number of years at CRU, where he headed primary aluminium research. Sanjay subsequently initiated the metals analysis and proprietary trading functions at Louis Dreyfus, before moving into investment management, and has traded across a range of different commodities during his career. This included heading up metals analysis and trading within the commodities desk at Stark Investments, a multi-billion dollar multi-strategy hedge fund.

Immediately prior to his current role, he managed commodity strategy and a cross-commodity portfolio, and was a partner at, a fund that primarily invested for high net worth individuals, family offices and institutional accounts. Sanjay graduated from Wye College, University of London, with a BSC. (Hons.) degree in Agricultural Economics.

